First, UGNUTLET received a reply in December 1981 from the KGB in which the KGB officer in November 1981 (see paragraph 3 of reference) told the agent that the KGB was not interested in V-2982's request to act as a letter drop for UGNUTLET. Instructions were given about not tampering with or opening any mail designated for UPSWING (such mail will be distinguishable from the agent's own mail by the use of an initial or shortening of the first name not normally so used by the agent). The KGB case officer wrote that he feared the possibility of an UPSWING trap in V-2982's request that UGNUTLET act as an accommodation. Nevertheless, he was instructed to advise the KGB about the extent of the mail and its place of origin (since, as previously reported, this mail came from a wide variety of places to show that V-2982 is involved in considerable activity, UPSWING sees certain advantages accruing from this development even if the agent was told not to try to read the letters). In fact, considering the slow, developmental pace of the operation, it would probably have been a most unusual, if not suspicious, move for the KGB to have instructed the agent otherwise. The KGB is now to continue to advise V-2982 and no mention has been made about the possibility of a trap.
